Letter from the Executive Director & Board Chair

Dear Friends,

We extend our deepest gratitude to you—our community, partners, and supporters—for standing alongside us in this work.

Because of you, Wings continues to create Space to Heal for adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse (CSA) and their loved ones. Your belief, your presence, and your commitment sustain every part of this mission.

As we reflect on 2025, we do so within a broader landscape marked by uncertainty and change. Across the country, shifts in funding and policy are creating real concern for the stability of essential services, including those adult survivors rely on.

In moments like these, what is at stake becomes even more clear.

Survivors deserve to be believed, supported, and protected not only when it is easy, but especially when systems are strained. They deserve care that honors their experiences and supports lifelong healing, and communities that respond with compassion, courage, and care.

At Wings, we remain steadfast in working toward this aim.

With your support, last year we kept adult survivors of CSA at the center of our work—strengthening survivor-centered programs, deepening culturally responsive practices, and ensuring healing remains accessible, inclusive, and community-driven. We also took intentional steps to diversify funding and stood in solidarity with organizations nationwide to protect critical services.

This work does not happen in isolation. It is made possible through community and people like you.

Time and again, we are reminded that healing is built through connection—in spaces where stories are honored, survivors are believed, and no one carries their experiences alone. In the face of adversity, community is not just meaningful; it is essential.

In 2025, this commitment came to life through the public launch of our Champions of Healing™ learning series, expanding awareness, access to knowledge, and elevating the voices of the one in five adults impacted by CSA. It was also reflected in our Services for Survivors and outreach programs.

We know there is more work ahead, and we cannot do it alone.

On behalf of our staff, Board of Directors, and Advisory Council—and most importantly, the survivors, loved ones, and providers we serve—thank you. Thank you for believing in this mission and for helping advance the collective healing our communities need and deserve.

In community,

Jennifer Stith, MAT, MA

Who We Are

Mission

Wings is building systems of support for adult survivors of CSA, combining in-depth health expertise with the healing power of community.

Vision

Healthy lives, relationships, and communities — for all.

Brand Promise

Space to Heal.

What We Do

We ensure everyone has access to the resources they need to speak about, heal from, and thrive beyond CSA trauma. We engage and encourage adult survivors, loved ones, providers, and community leaders to acknowledge the reality of this trauma and respond with care and compassion.

Achieved Through These Core Programs

Outreach & Education: brings awareness to adult survivors, loved ones, community members and service providers about the long-term consequences of CSA, the ways this trauma impacts adults, and opportunities for healing.

Services for Survivors: addresses adult survivors' needs through confidential phone consultations, referrals to qualified therapists/agencies, and therapist-facilitated, peer centered support groups that are donation based.

Clinical Training: builds competency and skill in meeting the unique needs of adult survivors for the therapists who serve as Wings support group facilitators. All Wings therapist-facilitators are required to participate in monthly supervision and at least four clinical trainings a year.

Systems Change: advances CSA trauma as a community health issue and improves provider screening and referral practices for adult survivors.

Becoming Champions of Healing™

Champions of Healing™: From Listening to Movement*

The 2025 public launch of Champions of Healing™ marked the culmination of years of listening, learning, and responding to adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse (CSA) and the people who support them.

Between 2016 and 2022, Wings conducted community-informed assessments across Colorado to better understand the barriers adult survivors face in accessing support.

What emerged was clear: stigma, silence, and limited awareness among survivors, loved ones, and providers alike continue to stand between survivors and the care they need and deserve.

Champions of Healing™ was created in response—a free, accessible online learning series designed to increase awareness and inspire action through two learning journeys: one for survivors and one for allies.

Grounded in the voices of survivors, loved ones, and professionals, the series deepens understanding of CSA and its lifelong impacts while equipping participants with tools to respond with compassion and support healing. It calls on individuals and communities to take meaningful action so that no survivor must navigate healing alone.

This work reflects a core belief: when knowledge is shared, stigma is reduced, and healing becomes more possible.

Expanding Awareness: CSA-SAM Kickoff

In a cultural landscape where denial, minimization, and complicity around CSA persist, expanding public understanding remains critical.

Wings opened Childhood Sexual Abuse Survivor Awareness Month (CSA-SAM) in September with a virtual kickoff that brought together community members, partners, and advocates for deeper learning and engagement. The event centered the realities adult survivors face today, including the layered impacts of historical, cultural, and identity-based trauma—particularly for those from marginalized communities whose experiences are too often overlooked or erased.

We shared key insights from our community needs assessments, highlighting the complexity of adult survivors' experiences and the importance of addressing them with care, attunement, and respect. These learnings are reflected throughout Champions of Healing™, reinforcing the need for approaches that are trauma-informed, culturally responsive and inclusive.

The kickoff also served as an intentional introduction to the series, inviting participants into continued learning and engagement. A live Q&A featuring Champions participants brought these insights to life, grounding the work in lived experience, as well as hope and intention.

By opening the month in community, we affirmed that awareness is not passive. It is an active, collective practice; one that helps create a world where adult survivors are seen, supported, and able to heal.

Champions of Healing™ Launch Celebration:

Together in Courage and Strength

To mark the culmination of these many years of work and to celebrate the public launch for the series, Wings convened adult survivors, advocates, partners, and supporters for the Champions of Healing™ Launch Celebration at the end of September.

At a time of broader uncertainty, the gathering became a space for connection, reflection, and renewed purpose. Together, we honored the progress that has brought greater visibility to childhood sexual abuse and recognized the ongoing work required to advance healing and justice.

The evening strengthened relationships across our community, elevated CSA as a critical health equity issue, and uplifted leaders advancing this work through research, education, and storytelling.

A powerful mission moment from Speak Out! graduate Sam grounded the event in lived experience—holding space for both truth and hope. It was a reminder of the courage it takes to share one's story, and the responsibility we carry to listen, believe, and respond with care.

More than a single event, the launch marked the continued growth of a movement rooted in connection, awareness, and collective action—one that carries forward with urgency and purpose.

Outreach & Education

Wings works to increase awareness of the long-term impacts of CSA on the lives of adult survivors. Through community education, outreach, and partnerships, we engage survivors, loved ones, service providers, and the broader community in understanding how CSA trauma can impact adult experiences and how healing is possible.

By creating opportunities for learning and dialogue, we help reduce stigma, foster connection, and build more informed and compassionate community.

Expanding Our Reach

In 2025, Wings continued to expand access to trusted, trauma-informed information—reaching individuals throughout Colorado, across the country and around the world.

This reach reflects more than visibility. It represents individuals actively seeking understanding, resources, and connection.

Through digital content, email communications, and educational campaigns, Wings continued to:

- Increase awareness of the long-term impacts of CSA
- Provide accessible, survivor-centered information
- Support individuals, loved ones, and professionals in responding with care

Each interaction represents an opportunity to interrupt silence and expand pathways to healing.

Outreach & Education

Virtual Education: Why it Matters; Reaching Survivors Through Awareness and Virtual Connection

Education about childhood sexual abuse (CSA) is critical to breaking silence, reducing stigma, and affirming that survivors' experiences—and their lasting impacts—are real, valid, and deserving of support. For many adult survivors, this understanding is a first step toward naming their experiences and seeking healing.

In an increasingly digital world, this education is often accessed online. Social media provides accessible, low-barrier opportunities for survivors, loved ones, and community members to engage with information at their own pace and in their own space. In 2025, Wings developed and shared educational carousel content designed to meet people where they are, offering clear, trauma-informed insights that foster recognition, validation, and connection.

Through a consistent presence in digital spaces, Wings expanded its reach and supported early moments of awareness. This work helps ensure more adult survivors encounter messages that affirm they are not alone, and that healing is possible. It also equips loved ones, allies, and professionals with the knowledge and tools to respond with greater understanding and intention.

Community Partnership Highlights

DASH Award

In October, in honor of survivors, Zero Tolerance for Domestic Abuse hosted an inspiring event celebrating the strength, compassion, and unwavering dedication of those who journey alongside survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault on their paths to healing. Zero Tolerance provides free counseling for victims of domestic violence and sexual assault at the PorchLight, A Family Justice Center.

As a new partner at PorchLight, Wings is honored to join this incredible network of providers working together to support survivors. We're excited to bring our adult survivor-centered services to this collaborative space and ensure that survivors of relationship violence have the option to address their history of CSA—if and when they feel ready.

Wings was also deeply honored to receive a DASH (Domestic Abuse Survivor Hero) Award from Zero Tolerance. These awards recognize the unsung heroes who help survivors rebuild their lives after trauma. We're proud and grateful to stand alongside our partners and community in creating a world free from violence and abuse.

COVA Conference

Wings presented at the Colorado Organization for Victim Assistance (COVA) Conference, sharing the Champions of Healing™ series with professionals across the state and expanding access to this resource in communities statewide.

Service for Survivors

Wings centers the needs of adult survivors of CSA through accessible, trauma-informed services. Our support groups are donation-based, ensuring that cost is not a barrier to connection. Within these spaces, survivors are met with understanding, belief, and care—often for the first time in community with others who share similar experiences.

Centering Healing

At the heart of Wings' work are the adult survivors we serve.

In 2025, we continued to provide survivor-centered, trauma-informed services designed to meet individuals wherever they are in their healing journeys. These services include:

- Confidential consultations
- Referrals to trusted, specialized providers
- Therapist-facilitated, peer-centered support groups
- Specialty groups including equine-assisted workshops, writing and Speak Out! groups

For many survivors, these spaces represent the first time they are met with belief, understanding, and shared experiences.

Support Group Impacts

In 2025, group members reported meaningful reductions in both the frequency and severity of several mental health & trauma-related symptoms, continuing trends seen in 2023 and 2024. The most significant improvements were seen in feelings of isolation, disconnection, and hopelessness.

Healing is not linear, and there is no single path forward. Our role is to ensure that adult survivors have access to compassionate, informed support—when and as they are ready.

95% of member respondents found their overall group experience to be good to excellent.

88% of members shared they have a better understanding of the connection between CSA trauma & life challenges.

88% of member respondents shared they feel less alone.

87% of member respondents found Wings support groups very or extremely valuable to their healing process.

We asked group members what is most helpful about group:

What is Most Helpful?

"It's nice to hear the same things I say myself from others. That's pretty powerful."

"Connection with other men who have experienced similar trauma."

"The empathy and compassion of my fellow group members and facilitators."

"The most helpful part has been learning that my family systems and story are not unique to me; that these things are repeated quite often in unhealthy & abusive family systems."

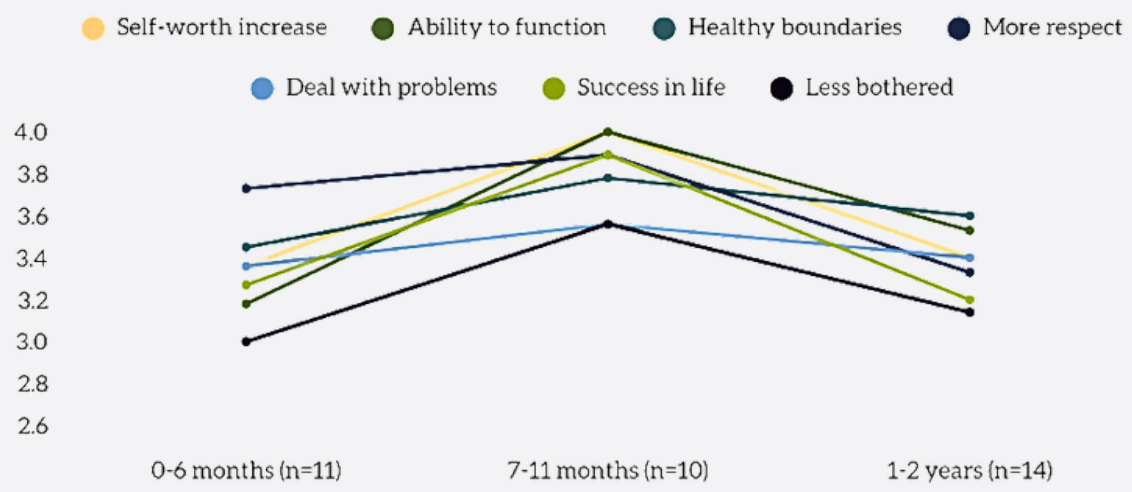
Support Group Outcomes / Time in Group



Support Group Member Testimonials

"I came into the group feeling alone, isolated and like no one else could understand my challenges. Through the support group, I felt seen, validated, and learned to be more compassionate towards myself."

"Wings meets the adults and all the hurt caused by CSA as they are. Gently assisting in recognizing the mask can be removed, piece by piece in your own time while your peers support and in encouragement do the same."

"I used to not understand myself, I have never talked about my experiences other than with an individual therapist. Now that I have been able to talk to others, I have a whole different understanding of myself and my experiences, and I love and understand myself even more."

Clinical Training

Wings Clinical Training Program helps strengthen the competency and skills of therapists who serve as Wings support group facilitators, equipping them to meet the unique needs of adult survivors. All therapist-facilitators participate in monthly supervision and complete at least four clinical training sessions each year.

Each year, Wings gathers feedback from support group facilitators to evaluate the effectiveness and impact of our programs. The following data highlights key insights shared through this annual facilitator survey.

Facilitator Testimonials

"I genuinely love this work. Groups are powerful and hearing from members that this is a place where they feel TRULY seen for the first time reminds me that magic is real."

"I shared some of the information I learned from Wings group facilitation as well as its training with my client. They are grateful for my depth of knowledge in serving this population that is often underserved or ignored."

"I joined Wings because I wanted to make a difference in the lives of adult survivors of CSA. What I didn't quite anticipate was the ways that I would be changed and so positively impacted by the members."

Systems Change

Wings works to shift systems and practices by advancing CSA trauma in the lives of adult survivors as a critical community health issue. Through collaboration and advocacy, we support improved screening, referral pathways, and trauma-informed responses across sectors.

By engaging providers and systems, we aim to create environments where adult survivors are more readily identified, supported, and connected to the services they need—strengthening the continuum of healing at every level.

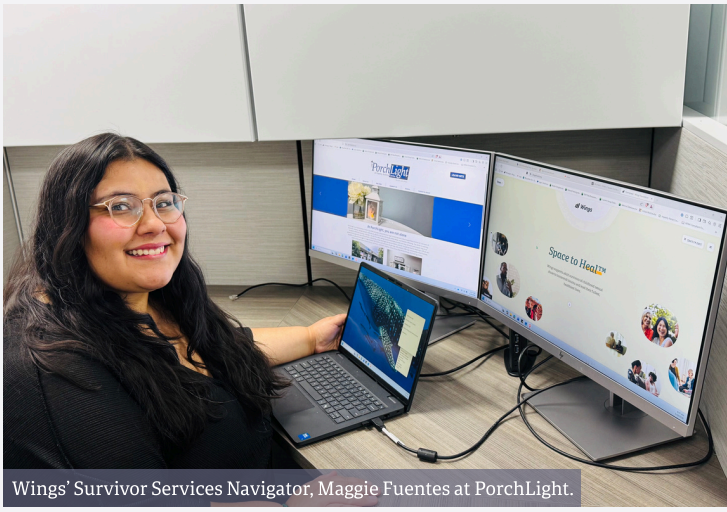
State Task Force

In 2025, Wings' State Task Force convened quarterly to keep CSA trauma at the forefront as a critical statewide priority. This collaborative, cross-sector group plays a key role in shaping education efforts, advancing best practices, and increasing access to healing resources for adult survivors across Colorado.

ASCSA C.A.R.E. Collaborative Pilot

In the fall of 2025, Wings launched the ASCSA C.A.R.E. (Community, Action, Response, Engagement) Collaborative at PorchLight Family Justice Center.

Through this pilot, Wings trained PorchLight's navigation team to incorporate screening for a history of CSA alongside traditional screenings for domestic violence and sexual assault for adult clients seeking services.



Wings' Survivor Services Navigator, Maggie Fuentes at PorchLight.

This approach acknowledges the reality of poly-victimization and creates opportunities for individuals to:

- Recognize a history of CSA
- Understand CSA's connections to present day challenges they may be experiencing
- Access support when they are ready
- Engage in more holistic healing, starting with the issue that is most pressing to them today

This work represents an important step toward integrating CSA awareness into broader systems of support for adults.

Leadville 100

At Wings, we were honored when Craig Campbell and Amber Hauer reached out with a shared vision: to raise funds and awareness for our mission through Craig's participation in the Leadville 100.

In July, we joined them at the Leadville Stage Race, where we witnessed firsthand the strength, purpose, and partnership behind their efforts. Craig later went on to complete the Leadville 100 as a tribute to Amber.

Amber, an adult survivor of CSA, and Craig transformed their journey into one of resilience and advocacy—helping elevate awareness while engaging their community in support of Wings.

We are deeply grateful to be part of their story.

Year-End Giving: Together in Courage & Strength

In the face of serious federal funding reductions, Wings was honored to be able to announce a $25,000 matching year-end campaign. Through this effort, our community came together to help sustain access to healing at a very critical time.

We are so grateful to each and every person, foundation, company, and organization who came together to help meet and exceed this goal.

We continue to be humbled by the ways our community recognizes the need to sustain our specialized services and continues to step up to this challenge.

If you would like to make a gift to continue our work, there are many ways to give.
